Abstract: A model of the relationship between the frequency of the word "and" and the frequency of the word "or" in the English language is presented. It is shown that the frequency of the word "and" is a function of the frequency of the word "or".

Abstract

Other work suggests that people with a history of trauma may be more likely to experience negative health outcomes. For example, a study by Cohen et al. (1991) found that people with a history of trauma were more likely to experience physical health problems. This suggests that trauma may have a long-term impact on health. However, more research is needed to understand the mechanisms of this relationship.
