Abstract – Using three studies (Study 1: $N = 100$; Study 2: $N = 100$; Study 3: $N = 100$), we examined the effects of the presence of a social norm on the decision to donate to a charity. In Study 1, we found that the presence of a social norm significantly increased the likelihood of donating. In Study 2, we found that the presence of a social norm significantly increased the amount donated. In Study 3, we found that the presence of a social norm significantly increased the likelihood of donating and the amount donated. These findings suggest that the presence of a social norm can have a significant impact on charitable giving.
