

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

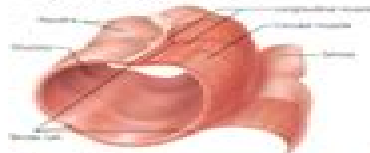

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

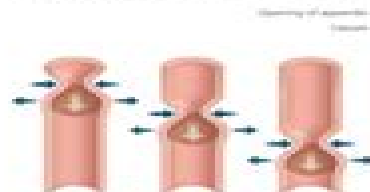

Layers of large intestine

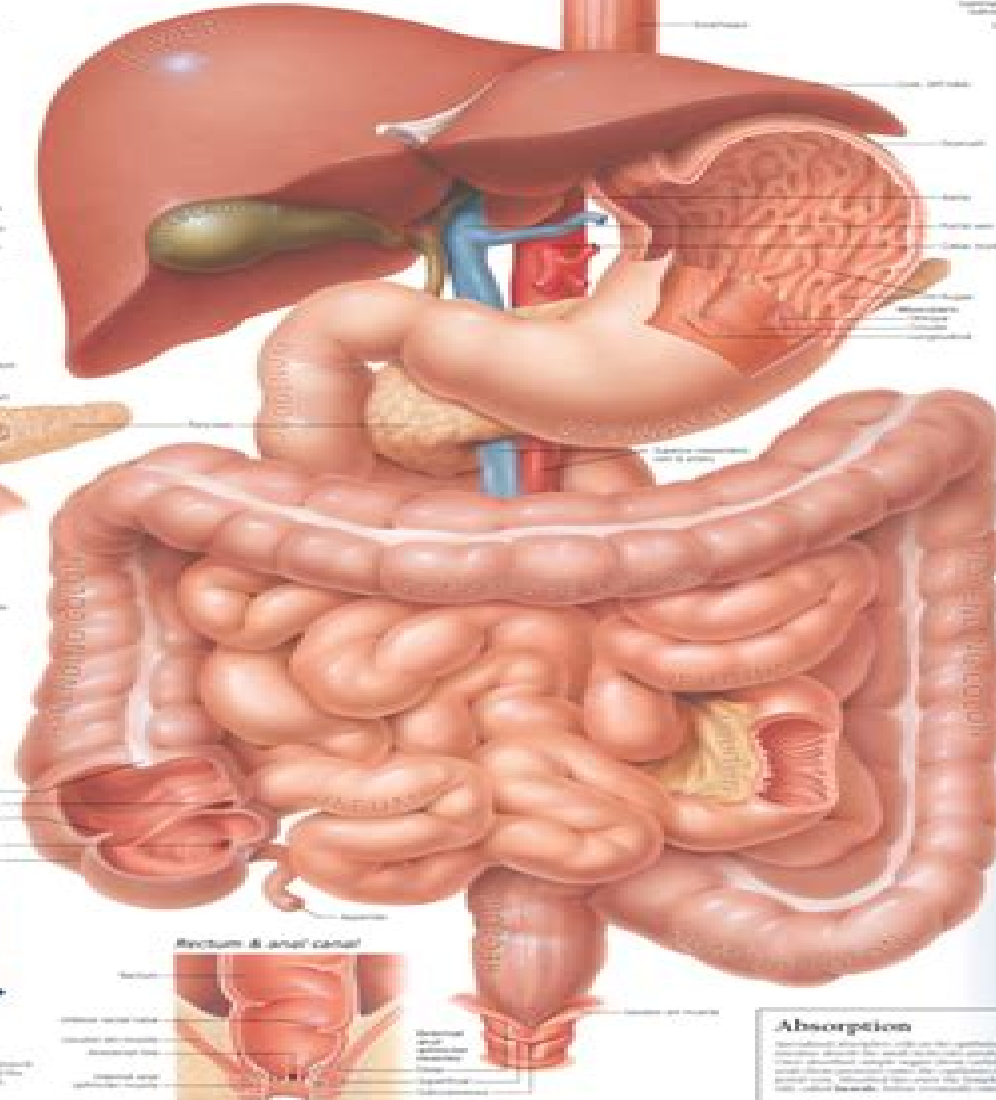

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

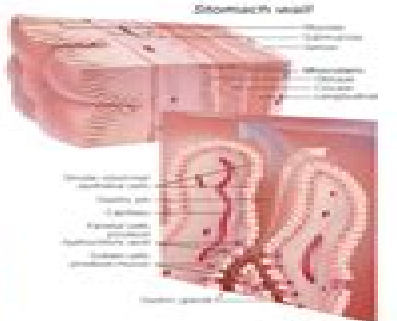

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. It also contains enzymes that break down food into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for mixing food with gastric juices and breaking it down into smaller pieces. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of nutrient absorption. It is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

Nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream through the walls of the small intestine. The process involves the transport of nutrients from the lumen of the intestine into the blood and lymphatic system.
