Academic Units In A Complex Changing World Adaptation And Resistance:

Academic Units in a Complex, Changing World Deanna de Zilwa, 2010-09-17 As clocks struck midnight on the 31st December 2009 announcing the dawn of a new decade amidst the jubilation of a new beginning we paused momentarily to reflect on the decade that had just past. It was a difficult era for many people and organisations. Many were affected by war, terrorism, famine, and tsunamis. First world citizens enjoyed opportunities to relax in a technologically driven utopia. People on streets, trains, and planes from London, Tokyo, to New York sported the white ear buds of iPhones as de rigueur adornments. The pace and intensity of our lives now seems to run at warp speed, we rush from appointment to appointment swigging vitamin enhanced mineral water, obsessing about fluctuations in our body mass index and the Dow Jones index in equal measure. Yet as individuals we can choose to accept or reject some of these changes. Those with sufficient material resources can cocoon themselves in high security fortress homes or relocate to safer, more tranquil environs or even redesign themselves with the aid of Botox and a skilled plastic surgeon. Yet some organisations do not have the luxury of volition; they cannot choose whether to accept or reject the affects of environmental changes. A type of organisation that has found itself situated in environments that are increasingly complex and turbulent are academic units, departments, schools, and faculties in many publicly funded universities around the globe.

How Organisational Change Influences Academic Work Sureetha De Silva, Donna Pendergast, Christopher Klopfer, 2022-12-21 Higher education institutions around the globe are facing complex issues that disrupt the usual roles and purposes of centres of learning and research. Forces such as globalisation, burgeoning knowledge based economies, rapid adoption of new technology, and global competition are changing the work and lived experiences of academics across the globe. This book addresses the unprecedented effects of these global pressures including the COVID 19 pandemic on university work and the resulting opportunity for innovative disruption. It presents the voices of 16 Australian university academics framed by standpoint theory which provide a unique perspective and insights into the rapid shifts impacting universities and how these affect academics' work lives. The stories uncover cases of disappointment and frustration, bullying and morale loss alongside positive change and the awareness of the need to change expectations. This work informs the development of the Academic Predicament Model (APM) which points to the erosion of academic professionalism and identifies how such change in university work consequently deprofessionalises academia in Australia. The long term effect is to challenge the place and function of higher education institutions. The need for transformation and potential for its outcomes has never been greater nor has the risk that the elements of the Academic Predicament Model will be amplified, causing the deprofessionalising of academia to be further accelerated. This book will be of interest to researchers in higher education exploring neoliberalism and its impact on education and academics' work.

Comparative Perspectives on Early Childhood Education Reforms in Australia and China Josephine Ng, Berenice Nyland, 2020-10-05 This book has been designed to add to the study and experience of early childhood ideas and experience.

in an international context The focus is Australia and China with three research projects explored to provide insights into the history and development of early childhood education in each country The work offers a consideration of the complexity of early childhood education in local and global contexts at a time when global relationships can benefit from moving beyond better cultural understandings to greater connections and reciprocity Each study has accompanying empirical data to support the interpretations offered The first part of the book presents historical context and examines policy issues the growth of the early childhood education workforce and the development of curriculum approaches in each country The two projects that follow describe teachers perspectives of children s learning and an in depth study of a collaborative higher education program that details stakeholder experiences By studying participant attitudes and ideas in each country we have been able to share early childhood knowledge and discuss perspectives through early childhood languages like perspectives on the role importance and nature of play and learning
