

Albert Einstein

(March 14, 1879 - April 18, 1955)

Albert Einstein was a famous scientist. He received the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1921.

Einstein is famous for his theories about light, matter, gravity, space, and time, which helped scientists to understand these things much better than they had before.

His theories include the theory of special relativity and the theory of general relativity. His most famous equation is $E = mc^2$. It means that energy and mass are different forms of the same thing, and that the amount of energy in a piece of mass is the same as the amount of the mass multiplied by the speed of light times itself (a very big number).

His Life:

Einstein was born at Ulm in Württemberg, Germany on March 14, 1879. His family was Jewish but was not very religious. Albert did not talk until he was about three, which is very unusual.[needs proving] When Albert was around four, his father gave him a magnetic compass. He was very interested in trying to understand how an invisible force could make the needle move and became interested in studying science and mathematics. This compass inspired him to explore the world. Albert went to a Roman Catholic school. He was not a good student, and many people thought him to be not very smart.
