From the Dardanelles to Oran Arthur J. Marder, 2015-06-10 This collection of thought provoking essays by arguably the 20th century's greatest naval historian was first published in 1974 but their continuing relevance fully justifies this reprint It opens with a stimulating reappraisal of the naval attack on the Dardanelles the success of which would have made the disastrous Gallipoli land campaign that followed completely unnecessary Marder identifies a number of relatively minor issues that made a failure of what was in reality a great strategic opportunity to shorten the war Other chapters cover what the Royal Navy did and did not learn from the Great War and Churchill's controversial time at the Admiralty before he became Prime minister in 1940 while Marder's analysis of the interwar Ethiopian Crisis asking whether military aggression can be countered by sanctions has powerful echoes of current political concerns The final essay looks at one of the most contentious episodes of the Second World War the British preemptive strike on the fleet of their one time allies at Oran after the French surrender in 1940 Because Marder's view of history emphasises the human dimension over abstract forces his work is always approachable in style and of as much interest to the layman as the professional historian This book is no exception The Standard American Encyclopedia of Arts, Sciences, History, Biography, Geography, Statistics, and General Knowledge ... John Clark Ridpath, 1897

Collaboration

and the Future of Education Gordon Andrews, Wilson J. Warren, James Cousins, 2015-10-08 Current educational reforms have given rise to various types of educational Taylorism which encourage the creation of efficiency models in pursuit of a unified way to teach In history education curricula this has been introduced through scripted textbook based programs such as Teacher Curriculum Institute's History Alive and completely online curricula They include the jargon of authentic methods such as primary sources cooperative learning differentiated instruction and access to technology yet the craft of teaching is removed and an experience that should be marked by discovery and reflection is replaced with comparatively empty processes This volume provides systematic models and examples of ways that history teachers can compete with and effectively halt this transformation The alternatives the authors present are based on collaborative models that address the art of teaching for pre service and practicing secondary history teachers as well as collegiate history educators Relying on original research and a maturing body of secondary literature on historical thinking this book illuminates how collaboration can create real historical learning AP U.S. History Prep Jonathan Chu, Warren Hierl, Louisa Moffitt, Bill
