developing from pure voice telephony to a transport commodity to transfer convergent data and content In the future voice telephony will only be part of a multitude of revenue models in the mobile sector In this connection mobile portals are gaining more and more importance On one hand they promise to be an additional source of income in the era of media convergence for providers publishers and content providers On the other hand demand is growing for new advertising options from the advertising industry Advertising in particular has recognised that mobile messages are more targeted and can be addressed almost without any wasted coverage Cross media advertising platforms are being sought above all such as this one Audi advertised the Q7 in a French magazine A mobile code was integrated in the advertisement with which the user could load the emotionally charged advertising film about the Audi Q7 on a mobile phone As a side effect Audi was able to collect mobile telephone numbers of potential customers through profiling those who have an affinity for the brand According to a study by the Marketing Board 31.6% of all surveyed companies already use mobile marketing and 37.5% want to increase their activities in the mobile marketing sector even more And this was mainly to the detriment of advertising banners in the Internet 17% So far all stakeholders in the market held back with portals in the special interest area of Cars The reason for this is too high fees for data transfer by the providers Mobile phone manufacturer Nokia which is making a massive push into the content sector reports of a downright user boycott of using mobile route planners Nokia strategist Michael Warm says Users load their routes on their mobile phones in the Internet free of charge and then start the navigation rather than navigating online for Euro 1.99 Manager of autobild.de Raoul Hess sees the same problem He sees the same readiness to pay for mobile portals as there is for the classical Internet Besides for games and ringtones users are not prepared to pay
