certain of rendering him less serviceable for a permanency has yet been decided to be a species of unsoundness on the correctness of which decision a difference of opinion exists in the veterinary profession It is an operation invented by Mr Sewell the Assistant Professor of the Veterinary College of which perhaps I cannot give a better description than by relating the evidence adduced on a trial when the question was put in litigation The action was brought by Btst against Osbomt and the cause was tried at Westminster in 1825 It was proved that the horse had been nerved Several eminent veterinary surgeons were called who stated that the operation of nerving consisted in the division of a nerve leading from the foot up the leg and that it was usually performed in order to relieve the horse from the pain arising from a disease in the foot the nerve cut being the vehicle of sensation from the foot That the disease in the foot would not be affected by the operation and would go on increasing or not according to its character That horses previously lame from the pain of such a disease would when nerved frequently go free from lameness and continue so for years that the operation had been found successful in cavalry regiments and horses so operated upon had been for years employed in active service but that in their opinion a horse that had been nerved whether by accident or design was unsound and could not be safely trusted for very severe work and that it was an organic defect The horse in question had not exhibited any lameness Chief Justice Best now Lord Wynford told the Jury that it was difficult to say
