The Neurocognition of Language Production Albert Costa, Kristof Strijkers, 2012-06-01 Over the last decades neuroscience has passed beyond mere phrenology and erpology and has become an important tool for investigating the spatial temporal and functional brain dynamics underlying human behavior In this Special Issue we would like to give a broad overview of recent significant contributions that neuroscientific research has provided to one of the most practiced psychomotor skills unique to humans namely language production Physiological studies in language production have not been as extensive compared to many other areas of human cognition and have just currently begun to generate important evidence for uncovering the cognitive mechanisms behind our ability to produce fast and efficient speech Nonetheless these findings have already demonstrated their scientific value and interest in neuroscientific approaches for studying language production is increasing exponentially Therefore we believe that a topic specially dedicated to neurocognitive advances in language production is not just in its place but even necessary Rather than focusing on a specific topic the idea is to cover many of the important aspects involved in producing speech semantics word retrieval syntax phonology motor preparation and control gathered from various paradigms e g object naming word naming etc and various populations monolinguals bilinguals patients The goal is to provide readers with a comprehensive overview of the general questions being addressed in neuroscientific studies on language production where the research stands how these findings are of importance for understanding and constraining cognitive models and which future directions have to be taken To this end we will invite experts in the field who have made significant contributions in the last several years to confer an important topic of language production critically discuss neuroscientific findings on this topic relate it to the actual behavior and cognitive models and importantly though novel questions which can be derived from their results and facilitate future research in the field Hereby we hope this Research Topic will be a source of reference both for experts as novices who wish to explore the various mental operations involved in language production from a neurocognitive point of view The Software Encyclopedia 2000 Bowker Editorial Staff,2000-05 Resources in Education ,1975-12 Dyslexia: Neuronal, Cognitive and Linguistic Aspects Yngve Zotterman,2013-10-22 Dyslexia Neuronal Cognitive however it is stressed that this part of the brain has visuo spatial capabilities The discussion is followed by a presentation of ophthalmological findings among children with learning difficulties The book then proceeds to the relationship of dyslexia with visual problems and linguistic awareness In this regard questions on the ability of children to be able to read prior and during their school years are raised The selection ends with a discussion on how to treat dyslexia through the use of computers This book is a great source of information for neurophysiologists psychophysiologicalists ophthalmologists and teachers who are interested in helping children learn to read and write
