Working with indigenous knowledge Fhumulani M. Mulaudzi, Rachel T. Lebese, 2022 The aim of the book is to assist both local and international scholars in articulating the scholarly discourse on indigenous health attitudes practices and experiences The indigenous lens that was used to generate and disseminate indigenous knowledge in this book will strengthen indigenous scholarship thus making it accessible to a wider audience In addition the information shared in this book will add value for scholars and assist them with the indigenous knowledge needed to address sustainable development goals This book is timeous and topical as the discourse on the decolonisation of the curriculum is widely debated in the higher education space The discourse on the scholarship of indigenous knowledge as the tacit local knowledge that stems from cultural practices within communities has not been well articulated in the current health science education milieu Indigenous knowledge has remained overlooked and undermined for a very long time and the information remains untapped in local communities The scholars who conducted the research on which this book is based unearthed a wealth of knowledge which was tacit in nature and translated it into implicit knowledge that can be documented and shared with other scholars globally This knowledge will assist health care scholars in benefiting from knowledge practices and cultural beliefs that will assist them in health care planning teaching evidence based practice and further research

Small reservoirs in Africa: a review and synthesis to strengthen future investment Saruchera, D.,Lautze, Jonathan,2019-11-04 Water is Life Hellum, Anne,Kameri-Mbote, Patricia,2015-10-19 This book approached water and sanitation as an African gender and human rights issue Empirical case studies from Kenya Malawi South Africa and Zimbabwe show how coexisting international national and local regulations of water and sanitation respond to the ways in which different groups of rural and urban women gain access to water for personal domestic and livelihood purposes The authors who are lawyers sociologists political scientists and anthropologists explore how women cope in contexts where they lack secure rights and participation in water governance institutions formal and informal The research shows how women as producers of family food rely on water from multiple sources that are governed by community based norms and institutions which recognise the right to water for livelihood How these common pool water resources due to protection gaps in both international and national law are threatened by large scale development and commercialisation initiatives facilitated through national permit systems is a key concern The studies demonstrate that existing water governance structures lack mechanisms which make them accountable to poor and vulnerable water users on the ground most importantly women The findings thus underscore the need to intensify measures to hold states accountable not just in water services provision but in assuring the basic human right to clean drinking water and sanitation and also to protect water for livelihoods

Community-based adaptation Hannah Reid,2017-10-02 Community based adaptation CBA to climate change is based on local priorities needs knowledge and capacities Early CBA initiatives were generally implemented by non government organisations NGOs and operated primarily at the local level Many used bottom up participatory processes to identify the climate change problem and appropriate responses Small localised stand alone initiatives are insufficient to address the scale of challenges climate change will bring however The causes of vulnerability such as market or service access or good governance also often operate beyond the project level Larger organisations and national governments have therefore started to implement broader CBA programmes which provide opportunities to scale up responses and integrate CBA into higher levels of policy and planning This book shows that it is possible for CBA to remain centred on local priorities but not necessarily limited to work implemented at the local level Some chapters address the issue of mainstreaming CBA into government policy and planning processes or into city or sectoral level plans e g on agriculture Others look at how gender and children s issues should be mainstreamed into adaptation planning itself and others describe how tools can be applied and finance delivered for effective mainstreaming This book was published as a special issue of Climate and Development
