

The Digestive System

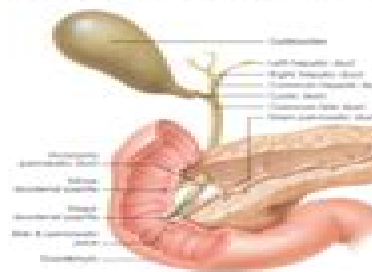

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

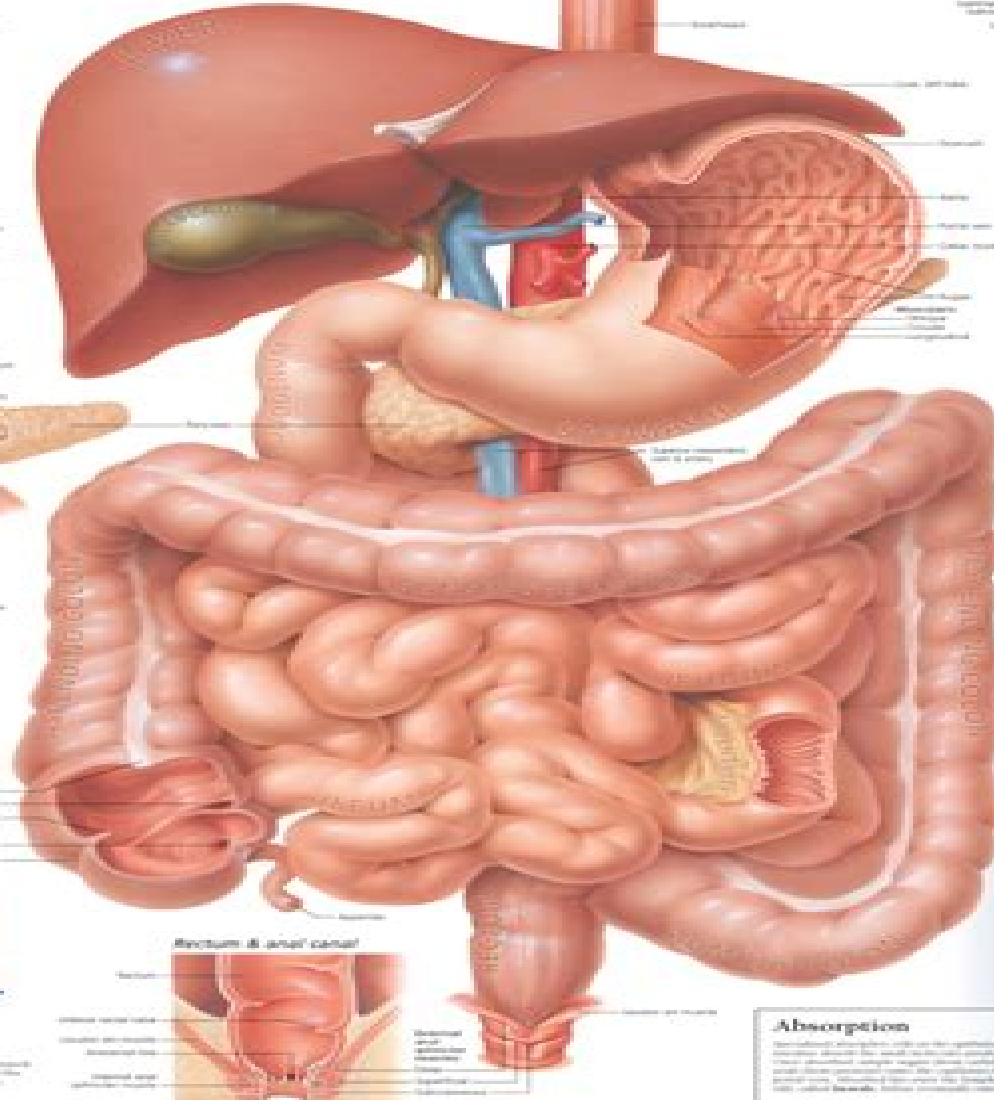

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter, thereby forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, called the peristaltic wave, moves the material forward.

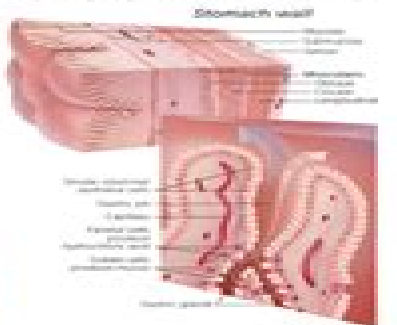

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Salivary glands secrete saliva, which moistens food and helps in the breakdown of carbohydrates. The salivary glands are the parotid, sublingual, and submandibular glands.

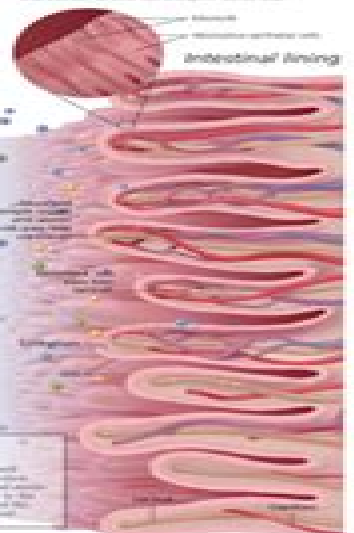

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscularis, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the central part of the abdomen. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The process of absorption is the movement of nutrients from the small intestine into the bloodstream. This process occurs in the villi of the small intestine. The villi are small, finger-like projections that increase the surface area of the small intestine, allowing for more efficient absorption of nutrients.
