The Psychology of Reading Paula J. Schwanenflugel, Nancy Flanagan Knapp, 2015-11-12. Incorporating cognitive neuropsychological and sociocultural perspectives, this authoritative text explains the psychological processes involved in reading and describes applications for educational practice. The book follows a clear developmental sequence from the impact of the early family environment through the acquisition of emergent literacy skills and the increasingly complex abilities required for word recognition, reading fluency, vocabulary growth, and text comprehension. Linguistic and cultural factors in individual reading differences are examined, as are psychological dimensions of reading motivation and the personal and societal benefits of reading. Pedagogical Features: End of chapter discussion questions and suggestions for further reading. Explicit linkages among theory, research, standards including the Common Core State Standards, and instruction. Engaging case studies at the beginning of each chapter. Technology Toolbox explores the pros and cons of computer-assisted learning.

Readers and Writers in the Middle Grades Martha Combs, 2003. The second edition of this popular book for grades 4-8 again reflects the author's emphasis on teaching reading and writing from a literature-based perspective and engaging middle grades learners in integrated literacy experiences. Coverage has been revised to meet the growing need to address early adolescents who still struggle with becoming proficient readers and writers. Taking a holistic interdisciplinary approach to literacy development, Combs deftly balances ideas for using authentic children's literature with techniques for making the most of the basal approach, providing a rich mix of classroom-tested models and examples that will serve future teachers well in their first classrooms and every classroom thereafter. For future and practice elementary school reading teachers.

Social Studies, Literacy, and Social Justice in the Elementary Classroom Ruchi Agarwal-Rangnath, 2022. Elementary-aged children are often positioned as not developmentally ready to learn about race, racism, and injustice. Yet the classroom materials used in most schools misrepresent history, withhold knowledge about racial injustice, or fail to uplift stories of resilience and resistance. For almost a decade, this groundbreaking resource has been one of the most highly used textbooks in justice-oriented social studies methods courses for grades 3-8. The author has thoroughly revised her bestseller to provide additional lessons that are more deeply situated within the current context of converging pandemics: COVID-19, racism, and impending environmental catastrophe. Grounded in the daily realities of public schools, Agarwal-Rangnath shows teachers how to use primary and other sources that will offer students new ways of thinking about history while meeting language arts standards for information text proficiency and critical thinking. Educators will also learn how to teach language arts and social studies as complementary subjects. New for the Second Edition More concrete connections between theory and practice Additional lesson examples that are centered in today's context of converging pandemics Reflection questions that challenge readers to think about ways to navigate curricular constraints and standardization in the classroom
