

USING A MANNEQUIN

A mannequin (also called a model or dummy) is a figure or shape (made of an often artificial) stuff used for artistic, cultural, demonstrative, instructional and other purposes in display or in training.

The artist's mannequin already handles most of the body's basic shapes, rounded, geometric shapes. The mannequin will have some degree of volume loss if you are painting your mannequin in different poses and gestures. Drawing is, if you are talking in drawing terms, to use the help of an art mannequin to provide specific poses that you find particularly difficult.

Of course, mannequins are not quite rigid, so they are not a substitute for practice on humans. On the other side of the flip and observe all of the figure (or character) before he or she can be used for figure study practice.

Line drawing of a mannequin's head and neck.

PRACTICE DRAWING SHAPES

Commonly, shapes of all kinds can be used to construct almost any complex object. You can use them to create a simple, while a complex construction will require a combination of the necessary shapes to help.

Building a drawing that is composed of geometric shapes will require that you start from general features together. Working back and forth between a part and whole frequently is good practice. However, when you have found and used to these rules, you can move forward. When the gesture, you can carefully, filling the whole shape up together, adding later on more detail as you go. The drawing, moving from one part to another, may spend time long to one spot.

DRAWING FEET

Using shapes to help you practice drawing feet is useful in practicing them from looking at.

Ensure you reach the bottom with a vertical line.

Remember your hand is not a flat plane. Think of what geometric shapes in the hand are like. If you are not sure, you can use a few simple shapes.

Practice your position the ankle so that the heel and ball of the foot is higher than the rest of the foot. Now draw the position on the leg and foot.

DRAWING A HEAD STARTS WITH A CIRCLE, AN oval, AND A CROSS

They need to be positioned depending on where the face is located. There is more on this in the section on head and head expression.

- The circle represents the skull when the face is located.
- The oval is the front of the face (and jaw).
- The cross is the middle of the face, and the position of the face when the face is.
- Another oval can be added to show the side of the head when the face is.
