Lyttelton Stewart Forbes Winslow

Anatomy Eye Packet Answers:

The Anatomy of Suicide Lyttelton Stewart Forbes Winslow, 2020-09-28 Human actions are more under the influence of example than precept consequently suicide has often been justified by an appeal to the laws and customs of past ages An undue reverence for the authority of antiquity induces us to rely more upon what has been said or done in former times than upon the dictates of our own feelings and judgement Many have formed the most extravagant notions of honour liberty and courage and under the impression that they were imitating the noble example of some ancient hero have sacrificed their lives They urge in their defence that suicide has been enjoined by positive laws and allowed by ancient custom that the greatest and bravest nation in the world practised it and that the most wise and virtuous sect of philosophers taught that it was an evidence of courage magnanimity and virtue There is no mode of reasoning so fallacious as that which is constantly appealing to examples A man who has made up his mind to the adoption of a particular course can easily discover reasons to justify himself in carrying out his preconceived opinions If a contemplated action abstractedly considered be good cases may be of service in illustrating it There must be some test by which to form a correct estimate of the justness or lawfulness of human actions and until we are agreed as to what ought to constitute that standard examples are perfectly useless No inferences deduced from the consideration of the suicides of antiquity can be logically applied to modern instances We live under a Christian dispensation Our notions of death of honour and of courage are in many respects so dissimilar from those which the ancients entertained that the subject of suicide is placed entirely on a different basis In the early periods of history self destruction was considered as an evidence of courage death was preferred to dishonour These principles were inculcated by celebrated philosophers who exercised a great influence over the minds of the people and in many instances the act of self immolation constituted a part of their religion Is it then to be wondered at that so many men eminent for their genius and renowned for their valour should under such circumstances have sacrificed themselves
