1. The first step in the process of DNA replication is the unwinding of the double helix. This is done by the enzyme helicase, which breaks the hydrogen bonds between the two strands.

2. Once the double helix is unwound, the two strands serve as templates for the synthesis of new complementary strands. This process is called semi-conservative replication.

3. The new strands are synthesized in the 5' to 3' direction. The template strands are oriented in the 3' to 5' direction.

4. The synthesis of the new strands is carried out by the enzyme DNA polymerase. This enzyme adds nucleotides to the 3' end of the growing strand.

5. The process of DNA replication is highly accurate. The error rate is approximately 1 in 10 billion nucleotides.

6. The final product of DNA replication is two identical double helices, each consisting of one original template strand and one newly synthesized strand.

7. The process of DNA replication is essential for the growth and development of all living organisms.

8. The study of DNA replication has led to a better understanding of the molecular basis of life.
