Reasons to Believe George R. Urquhart,2010-07 Although the debate has raged on for centuries in both the public realm and in the halls of academia the deciding blow of whether or not a Creator fashioned the cosmos from nothing is still a lively and intense discussion Can we know whether the Big Bang occurred If so does it present trouble for a believer s worldview And what parts of evolution are scientifically verifiable and what are metaphysical Do we know of phenomena that cannot be explained by elements acting on each other over time George R Urquhart began this book as a simple list of amazing things that could not be categorized or explained without the loving intentions of a Creator Maturing beyond those simple goals Reasons to Believe has grown into a full resource for understanding the questions concerning God s creation With a objectivity and ability to honestly face the facts George shows the world that a strong foothold can be established in both science and a belief in God without compromising the two Follow George as he leads you clearly and concisely through the realms of rigorous scientific study and shows you the miracles and wonders of a creative God Collecting 19th & 20th Century Pocket Watches , Plundered Skulls and Stolen Spirits Chip Colwell,2017-03-08 A leading anthropologist explores the fraught project of repatriating Native American sacred objects in this moving and thoughtful work Publishers Weekly Who own the objects that connect us to history And who has the right to decide particularly when the objects are sacred or in the case of skeletal remains human As senior curator of anthropology at the Denver Museum of Nature Science Chip Colwell has navigated questions like these firsthand In Plundered Skulls and Stolen Spirits he examines how to weigh the religious freedom of Native Americans against the academic freedom of scientists and whether the emptying of museum shelves elevates human rights or destroys a common heritage Today hundreds of tribes use the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act to recover their looted heritage from museums across the country Colwell shares a personal account of this process following the trail of four objects as they were created collected and ultimately returned to their sources a sculpture that is a living god the scalp of a massacre victim a ceremonial blanket and a skeleton from a tribe considered by some to be extinct These stories reveal a dramatic process that involves not merely obeying the law but negotiating the blurry lines between identity and morality spirituality and politics Repatriation Colwell argues is a difficult but vitally important way for museums and tribes to heal the wounds of the past while creating a respectful approach to caring for these rich artifacts of history
