

gene regulation

I. Prokaryotic Gene Regulation

constitutive genes = always needed + constantly transcribed other genes are only transcribed when needed

A. Lac Operon Model

in prokaryotes genes are regulated at transcription

3 genes for lactose metabolism in E.coli on DNA:

1. lac Z
2. lac Y
3. lac A

if no lactose - cell does NOT make these enzymes if lactose is present - enzymes are made

e.coli prefers glucose to lactose only metabolizes lactose if there is no/very little glucose operon = a group of genes controlled by a single regulatory signal → controlled by an operator

ONLY IN PROKARYOTES

transcribed together

operon = sequence of DNA with:

1. promoter
2. operator - switch on 'DNA'
3. structural genes

promoter and operator re binding sites on DNA - not transcribed inducible gene(lac operon) usually off; transcription need to be turned on a repressor is bound to operator to turn on - an inducer molecule inactivates the repressor

2 ways of regulating an operon:

1. negative regulation - repressor prevents transcription(repressor acts like a car break)
2. positive regulation - transcribed, but.....only a little(pressing on the accelerator)
