He's studied his daughter like a seismologist on the lookout for waves and surrounded her with everything she might want, everything he can think of at least to be happy. What Clover wants is answers. This summer she thinks she can find them in the second bedroom which is full of her mother's belongings. Volume isn't important; what she is looking for is essence, the undiluted bits, a collection of things that will tell the full story of her mother, her father, and who she is going to be. But what you find depends on what you're searching for.

Make-Believe David Dickinson, 2020-01-01. I will tell you a story that will make you believe in God. No story can guarantee being able to do this. Yet novelists can tell stories that make us think about what we believe about God and why. Despite repeated predictions of the death of the novel, thousands of works of fiction are published and read in Britain each year. Although Western society is less religiously observant than it was many years ago, 21st-century novelists persist in pursuing theological, religious, and spiritual themes. Make Believe seeks to explain why. With chapters offering analyses of novels from several genres—so-called literary fiction, historical fiction, science fiction, fantasy, and dystopia—David Dickinson discusses a wide spectrum of novelists. Both those who are avowedly atheistic and those who have a vested interest in perpetuating biblical stories feature. Well-known writers such as Rushdie, McEwan, McCarthy, and Martell rub shoulders with some you may be meeting for the first time. Appealing to literature students and people who simply enjoy reading, whether Christian or not, this study of God in novels invites us to open our minds and allow aspects of our culture to shape our understanding of God and to change our ways of talking about the divine.

Murkin, 2020-06-01 Psychoanalytic Insights into Fundamentalism and Conviction The Certainty Principle examines the role of and need for certainty in mental life addressing questions raised by fundamentalism and extremism and exploring its relation to human nature Murkin proposes a new synthesis in which certainty itself can be a cause of suffering and part of a defensive manoeuvre and considers how the need for certainty can be managed in a positive way rather than creating fear and extreme emotional responses Illustrated throughout with examples from psychotherapy practice literature and international politics this book considers how the quest for certainty dominates much of human thinking Murkin examines personal relationships fundamentalist elements can generate harm in anyone but can be mitigated with understanding and work in therapy
