

The Digestive System

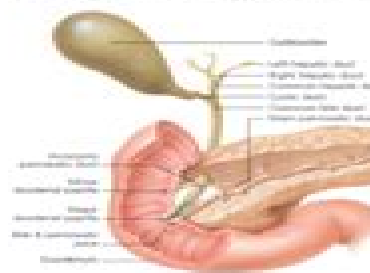

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

Just below the stomach, organs known as the accessories of the digestive system, which are connected to the stomach by the digestive accessory ducts, assist in the process. The liver is a large organ on the right side of the abdomen that produces bile, a substance that helps in the digestion of fats. The pancreas is a small organ located behind the stomach that produces pancreatic juice, which contains enzymes that help in the digestion of food.

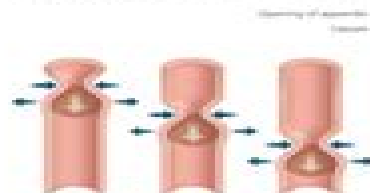

Layers of large intestine

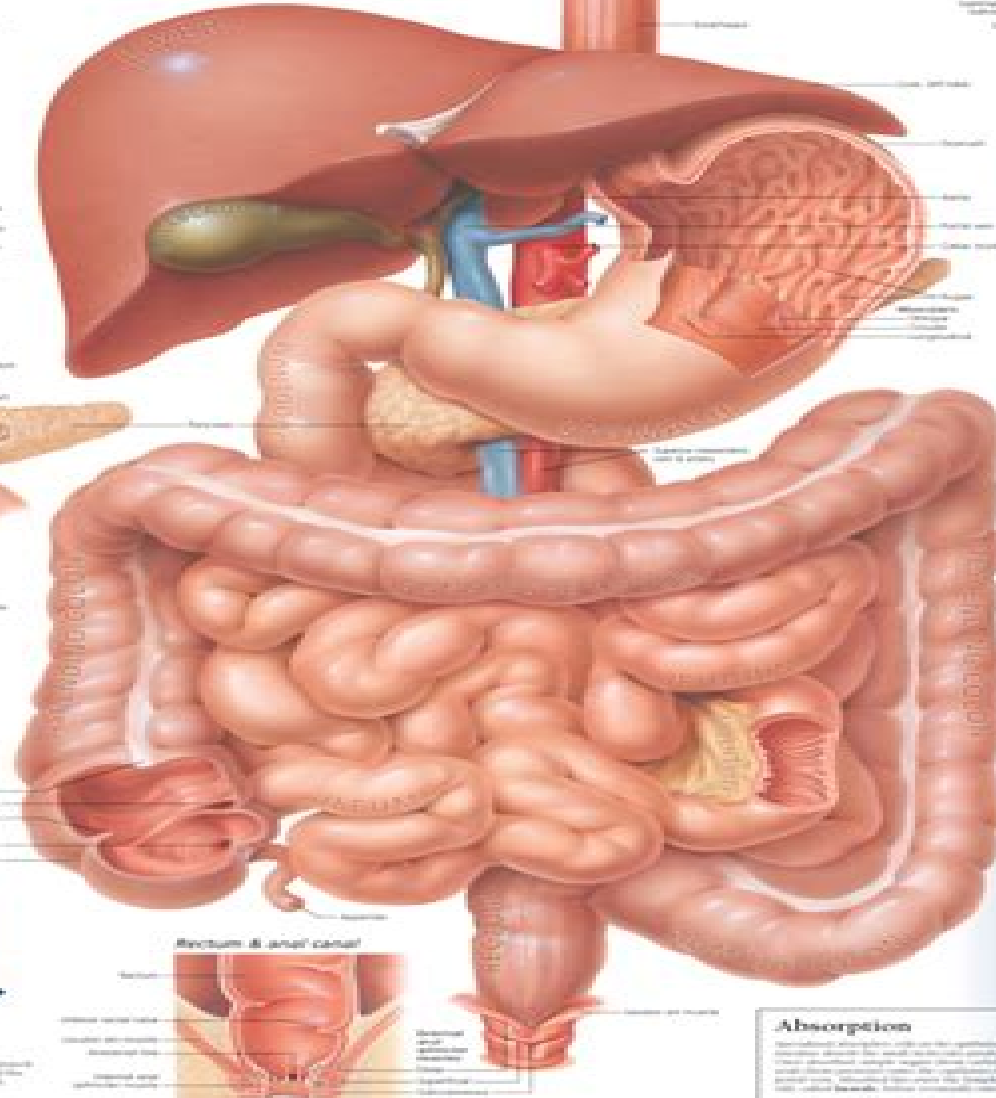

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, and the sigmoid colon. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food, forming the feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of waves of contraction called peristalsis. These contractions are initiated by the peristaltic reflex and the peristaltic reflex is initiated by the peristaltic reflex.

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food (mastication) is the first step in digestion. The salivary glands (parotid, sublingual, and submandibular) produce saliva, which contains the enzyme amylase that begins the digestion of carbohydrates. Saliva also contains mucin, which lubricates the food and helps it move down the esophagus.

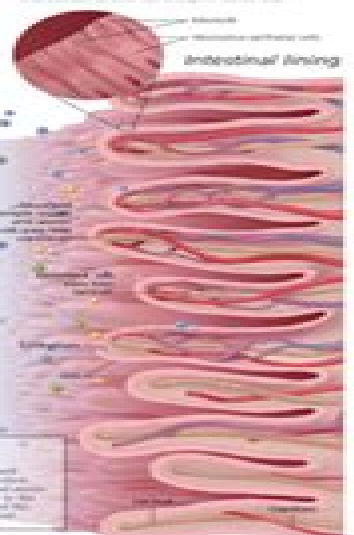

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach has a thick, muscular wall that contracts to mix food with gastric juice, forming a semi-solid mass called chyme.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. It is responsible for the digestion of food and the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is highly coiled and has a large surface area for absorption.

Absorption

The process of absorption involves the movement of nutrients from the small intestine into the bloodstream. This process occurs in the intestinal lining, which is composed of epithelial cells that have a large surface area for absorption.
