

Overview

An Anthropologist on Mars: Seven Paradoxical Tales is a narrative non-fiction essay collection by Oliver Sacks originally published in 1995. Sacks documents and comments upon seven patients with neurological conditions that challenge preconceived notions about illness, disorder, adaptation, and self-perception. This collection builds upon Sacks's previous works featuring neurological case studies, including the critically acclaimed The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat.

Oliver Sacks, M.D. was an author, medical historian, neurologist, and professor of neurology at NYU School of Medicine; he passed away in 2015 but remains known for his profound and passionate writing about medicine and neurological case studies. His bestselling books include The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat, Musicophilia, Time of My Life, Awakenings, The Mind's Eye, On the Move, A Life, and more. In 1990, Awakenings was adapted into an Academy Award-nominated film of the same name, while many of his other texts have inspired other writers, filmmakers, playwrights, and musicians. Sacks was a contributor to the New Yorker, the New York Review of Books, and NPR. The New York Times once called him "the poet laureate of contemporary medicine."

Summary

Sacks begins the book with a chapter detailing his recovery after a recent shoulder surgery. He marvels at how his body and mind adapted quickly and efficiently. Although his surgeon had given him a rough idea of what his recovery might look like, he told Sacks that the particular ways he would need to adapt would become apparent over time; he told patients have the same experience. Sacks considers the intersubjectivity of illness, disease, and disorder, remarking that perhaps our understanding of health is too rigid and static. Invoking the human body's plasticity, he says he wishes to learn from patients with neurological and psychiatric differences to see how they have adapted to living in the real world outside of a hospital setting. He tells the reader that his mission is to act as a "neuroanthropologist," reporting on and analyzing patients as they navigate their lives to see what we can learn about the adaptability of the human mind.
