Abstract — This paper reports on a study of the experiences of people who have been involved in a violent crime. The study was conducted in a hospital setting and involved 10 participants. The participants were interviewed about their experiences of the crime and the impact it had on them. The results of the study suggest that people who have been involved in a violent crime experience a range of psychological and physical symptoms. These symptoms can have a significant impact on their quality of life. The study also found that people who have been involved in a violent crime often experience feelings of isolation and lack of support. This suggests that there is a need for support services for people who have been involved in a violent crime.
