Effects of agricultural mechanization on smallholders and their self-selection into farming Takeshima, Hiroyuki,Shrestha, Rudra Bahadur,Kaphle, Basu Dev,Karkee, Madhab,Pokhrel, Suroj,Kumar, Anjani,2016-12-16 This research was undertaken to better assess the role of mechanization in the future of smallholder farmers in Nepal It addresses the knowledge gap about whether promoting mechanization that is often complementary to land can effectively support smallholders particularly in the face of a growing nonfarm sector Rising rural wages in Nepal have increasingly put pressures on smallholder farmers who tend to operate labor intensive farming Agricultural mechanization through custom hiring of tractor services has recently been considered as an option to mitigate the impact of rising labor costs for smallholders However the benefit of agricultural mechanization may still be better captured by exploiting the economies of scale of medium to large farmers rather than smallholders In the meantime the Nepal agricultural sector still employs a disproportionate share of workers given its share in the economy potentially depressing agricultural labor productivity It is therefore an important policy question whether to 1 continue supporting smallholders through custom hired tractor services or 2 encourage smallholders to rent their farms out to medium size or larger farmers while helping smallholders specialize in the nonfarm sector where their labor productivity may be higher Using samples from the Terai zone one of the agroecological belts in Nepal largely consisting of lowland plains from the Nepal Living Standards Survey we assess whether the benefits of hiring in tractor services are greater among medium to large farmers than among smallholders and how these benefits may depend on smallholders decision to remain in or leave farming This study also contributes to the impact evaluation literature by showing that jointly assessing the effects of two treatments whether to adopt custom hired tractor services and continue farming or to search for better options and specialize in off farm activities can lead to different implications than assessing them separately Our analyses suggest that the government should continue to promote custom hired tractor services not only for medium to large farmers but also for smallholders If over time barriers to specializing in nonfarm activities are lowered and more smallholders start leaving farming mechanization may no longer benefit the remaining smallholders Support for mechanization can then be focused more on medium to large farmers while types of support other than mechanization can be devised for the remaining smallholders

The effect of land inheritance on youth employment and migration decisions:

Evidence from rural Ethiopia Kosec, Katrina,Ghebru, Hosaena,Holtemeyer, Brian,Mueller, Valerie,Schmidt,

Emily,2017-03-28 In Ethiopia there are two binding forces push and pull that deserve attention when it comes to youth occupational and spatial mobility choices and the national land use and transfer policy On the one hand the fact that the land rental market in Ethiopia is supply constrained due to market and policy distortions marginalizes youth and serves as a push factor leading them to look elsewhere for a livelihood strategy On the other hand the regulatory conditions and restrictions attached to land use and inheritance rights may serve as a pull factor and force youth to be tied to the rural and or farming sector Our study thus aims to explore how youth land access both inheritance and market based affects their migration and employment decisions We explore this question in the context of rural Ethiopia using panel data from 2010 and 2014 We find that larger expected land inheritances significantly lower the likelihood of long distance permanent migration and of permanent migration to urban areas during this time Inheriting more land is also associated with a significantly higher likelihood of employment in agriculture and a lower likelihood of employment in the nonagricultural sector Conversely the decision to attend school is unaffected These results appear to be most heavily driven by males and by the older half of our youth sample We also find several mediating factors matter Land inheritance plays a much more pronounced role in predicting rural to urban permanent migration and nonagricultural sector employment in areas with less vibrant land markets and in relatively remote areas those far from major urban centers Overall the results reaffirm the notion that push factors dominate pull factors in dictating occupational and migration decisions in Ethiopia and highlight youth preferences to use migration or non agricultural employment as a last resort after exhausting other means of accessing land such as temporary land rental

Liu,2022-05-25 This book analyzes international and Chinese regulatory approaches addressing environmental risks that may be caused by GM crops and examines how China implements its international obligations in its policies and laws Using the legal doctrinal method the book discusses the precautionary principle and the public involvement principle as well as several legal measures at the international law level and in Chinese law It observes that legal principles and measures as provided for in China s GMO legal framework have generally implemented the international obligations regarding the prevention of environmental risks that may be caused by the cultivation of GM crops and related activities However the book argues that Chinese law lacks an explicit codification of the precautionary principle and the same is true with regard to public participation the regulatory framework lacks specific obligations It concludes that future research should focus on the application and enforcement of the relevant Chinese legislation and that it is also important to investigate how the environmental risks that may be caused by new techniques such as genome editing techniques could be prevented given the experience gained by regulating the cultivation of GM crops and related activities Can food aid relax farmers' constraints to adopting climate-adaptive agricultural practices? ?Ignaciuk, A., Malevoli, G., Scognamillo, A., Sitko, N.,2022-05-16 The adoption of climate adaptive agricultural practices CAAPs among resource poor smallholder households is typically hindered by liquidity and risk constraints Using an inverse probability weighted estimator that uses three waves of nationally representative panel survey data from Ethiopia Malawi and the United Republic of Tanzania this article examines whether food transfers help overcome barriers to the adoption of selected CAAPs The results show that in each country analysed receiving food transfers increase the probability of adopting at least one CAAP Animal Welfare Assessment, Volume II
