Productivity in Higher Education Caroline M. Hoxby, Kevin Stange, 2020-01-10 How do the benefits of higher education compare with its costs and how does this comparison vary across individuals and institutions These questions are fundamental to quantifying the productivity of the education sector The studies in Productivity in Higher Education use rich and novel administrative data modern econometric methods and careful institutional analysis to explore productivity issues The authors examine the returns to undergraduate education differences in costs by major the productivity of for profit schools the productivity of various types of faculty and of outcomes the effects of online education on the higher education market and the ways in which the productivity of different institutions responds to market forces The analyses recognize five key challenges to assessing productivity in higher education the potential for multiple student outcomes in terms of skills earnings invention and employment the fact that colleges and universities are multiproduct firms that conduct varied activities across many domains the fact that students select which school to attend based in part on their aptitude the difficulty of attributing outcomes to individual institutions when students attend more than one and the possibility that some of the benefits of higher education may arise from the system as a whole rather than from a single institution The findings and the approaches illustrated can facilitate decision making processes in higher education

Inequality and Fiscal Policy Mr. Benedict J. Clements, Ruud A. de Mooij, Mr. Sanjeev Gupta, Mr. Michael Keen, 2015-09-21 The sizeable increase in income inequality experienced in advanced economies and many parts of the world since the 1990s and the severe consequences of the global economic and financial crisis have brought distributional issues to the top of the policy agenda The challenge for many governments is to address concerns over rising inequality while simultaneously promoting economic efficiency and more robust economic growth The book delves into this discussion by analyzing fiscal policy and its link with inequality Fiscal policy is the government's most powerful tool for addressing inequality It affects households consumption directly through taxes and transfers and indirectly via incentives for work and production and the provision of public goods and individual services such as education and health An important message of the book is that growth and equity are not necessarily at odds with the appropriate mix of policy instruments and careful policy design countries can in many cases achieve better distributional outcomes and improve economic efficiency Country studies on the Netherlands China India Republic of Congo and Brazil demonstrate the diversity of challenges across countries and their differing capacity to use fiscal policy for redistribution The analysis presented in the book builds on and extends work done at the IMF and also includes contributions from leading academics

Science Classroom Processes Activities and Discourse Developing Critical Thinking Enquiry Empirical Evidence Problems of Teaching Social Science Studies Sources Primary and Secondary Project Work Evaluation Practice Sets 1 5 Value and Unequal Exchange in International Trade Andrea Ricci, 2021-05-19 Contrary to the claims made by neoliberal governments and mainstream academics this book argues that the huge increase in trade in recent decades has not made the world a fairer place instead the age of globalization has become a time of mass migration caused by increasing global inequality The theory of unequal exchange challenges the free trade doctrine claiming that transfers of value from poorer to richer countries are hidden behind apparently equivalent market transactions Following a critical review of the existing approaches the book proposes a general theory of unequal exchange in the light of an innovative reconstruction of Marx's international law of value in which money and exchange rates play a crucial role in decoupling value captured from value produced by different countries even in perfectly competitive world markets On this theoretical basis the book provides an empirical analysis of the international transfers of value in both traditional trade and Global Value Chains The resulting world mapping of unequal exchange shows the geographical hierarchy of capital global exploitation by revealing a world divided into two quite separate camps of donor and receiving countries the former being the poorer countries and the latter the richer countries This book is addressed to scholars and students of economics and social sciences as well as activists of the North and the South interested in a better understanding of the asymmetric power relations implied in global trade It makes a significant contribution to the literature on political economy trade Marxism international relations and economic geography

The effect of land inheritance on youth employment and migration decisions: Evidence from rural Ethiopia Kosec, Katrina, Ghebru, Hosaena, Holtemeyer, Brian, Mueller, Valerie, Schmidt, Emily, 2017-03-28 In Ethiopia there are two binding forces push and pull that deserve attention when it comes to youth occupational and spatial mobility choices and the national land use and transfer policy On the one hand the fact that the land rental market in Ethiopia is supply constrained due to market and policy distortions marginalizes youth and serves as a push factor leading them to look elsewhere for a livelihood strategy On the other hand the regulatory conditions and restrictions attached to land use and inheritance rights may serve as a pull factor and force youth to be tied to the rural and or farming sector Our study thus aims to explore how youth land access both inheritance and market based affects their migration and employment decisions We explore this question in the context of rural Ethiopia using panel data from 2010 and 2014 We find that larger expected land inheritances significantly lower the likelihood of long distance permanent migration and of permanent migration to urban areas during this time Inheriting more land is also associated with a significantly higher likelihood of employment in agriculture and a lower likelihood of employment in the nonagricultural sector Conversely the decision to attend school is unaffected These results appear to be most heavily driven by males and by the older half of our youth sample We also find several mediating factors matter Land inheritance plays a much more pronounced role in predicting rural to urban permanent migration and nonagricultural sector employment in areas with less vibrant land markets and in relatively remote areas those far from major urban centers Overall the results reaffirm the notion that push factors dominate pull factors in dictating occupational and migration decisions in Ethiopia and highlight youth preferences to use migration or non agricultural employment as a last resort after exhausting other means of accessing land such as temporary land rental
