Abstract

Abstract: This is a preliminary study of the effects of a 10-week training program on the performance of a group of 10 young male athletes. The program was designed to improve the athletes' performance in a 100-m sprint. The results of the study show that the athletes' performance improved significantly after the training program. The mean time for the 100-m sprint decreased from 15.5 seconds to 14.2 seconds. The standard deviation of the times decreased from 0.8 seconds to 0.5 seconds. The results of the study suggest that the training program was effective in improving the athletes' performance in a 100-m sprint.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of older adults. The study was a randomized controlled trial. The intervention group consisted of 20 older adults who participated in a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program. The control group consisted of 20 older adults who did not participate in the program. The results of the study showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical and psychological health than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The results also showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical and psychological health than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The results of the study showed that the intervention group had significantly higher levels of physical and psychological health than the control group at the end of the 12-week program.
