

A Man In A Million

James William Gilbert

A Man In A Million:

One Man In Ten Million Ronald Powers, 2013 The classes of 1942 and 1943 from America's high schools made up the largest percentage of the 10 million men that served in the American Armed Forces during World War II. Many were drafted but many more freely enlisted because they felt it their patriotic duty. They did not take this decision lightly. For most it was the most fearsome decision they would ever make. My father Richard E. Powers served with the 104th Infantry Regiment as a part of the 26th Yankee Infantry Division. They fought as a part of General Patton's Third US Army. Both Dad and his regiment experienced many firsts while fighting in the European Theater of Operations. These men were citizens one moment and soldiers the next. None were professional soldiers but they experienced the same privations, fears and terror as their professional comrades. Many displayed courage beyond imagination but if they survived to talk about their experiences they rarely did. My dad's generation was a generation of gentlemen who were very humble. Their sufferings and successes were a means to an end not to be displayed as a badge of honor. Dad was typical of his generation from his voluntary enlistment to his combat experiences across the European continent. His story is not exceptional in its difference from other soldier's stories but is exceptional in its commonality. You will follow Dad from his decision to enlist to his return to the country he loved including the 202 days that the 104th Infantry Regiment spent in combat. one man in ten million

Two Thousand Million Man-Power Gertrude Trevelyan, 2022-11-30 Two Thousand Million Man Power follows Robert, a chemist, and Katherine, a schoolteacher, through two tumultuous decades in English history. From New Year's Eve 1919 to the funeral of King George V in 1936, they experience youthful radicalism, economic boom and bust, comfortable middle class life in the suburbs and grinding poverty and the debilitating experience of looking for work where there is none to be found. Gertrude Trevelyan sets their story against the backdrop of newspaper headlines, radio broadcasts and advertising slogans, contrasting the promises of progress and technology with the brutal effects of economic upswings and downturns. The result is one of the finest fictional portraits of English life in the 1920s and 1930s, the equivalent for England of John Dos Passos's epic U.S.A. Utterly forgotten for over 80 years, Gertrude Trevelyan is finally being rediscovered. The stylistic and imaginative daring of her fiction arguably makes her one of the finest English novelists of the generation that followed Virginia Woolf. A panoramic view of English life from 1919 to 1936. Two Thousand Million Man Power is no wistful nostalgic account of this time. Instead, Gertrude Trevelyan shows how even the brightest and most able personalities can be ground down by economic highs and lows and a system in which individuals quickly disappear into crowds and statistics One year Robert and Katherine are enjoying the consumer comforts of a radio a car a house in the suburbs The next they are struggling to make ends meet in a tiny squalid East End flat as Robert trudges hopelessly into London each day in hopes of finding work The result is a savage portrait equalled only by George Orwell s The Road to Wigan Pier [The Treasury of Knowledge and Library of Reference: A million of facts \[The book of facts, by Samuel L.
