

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food is broken down mechanically in the mouth, is digested through a series of chemical reactions, and is absorbed into the bloodstream. The digestive system also stores food for digestion and eliminates waste from the body. The digestive system also stores food for digestion and eliminates waste from the body.

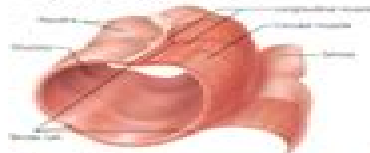

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This acts as a strong agent on the chyme, while the duodenum's mucous membrane secretes digestive enzymes further. Bile, from the liver, emulsifies fat, breaking it down into small droplets in the gallbladder.

Layers of large intestine

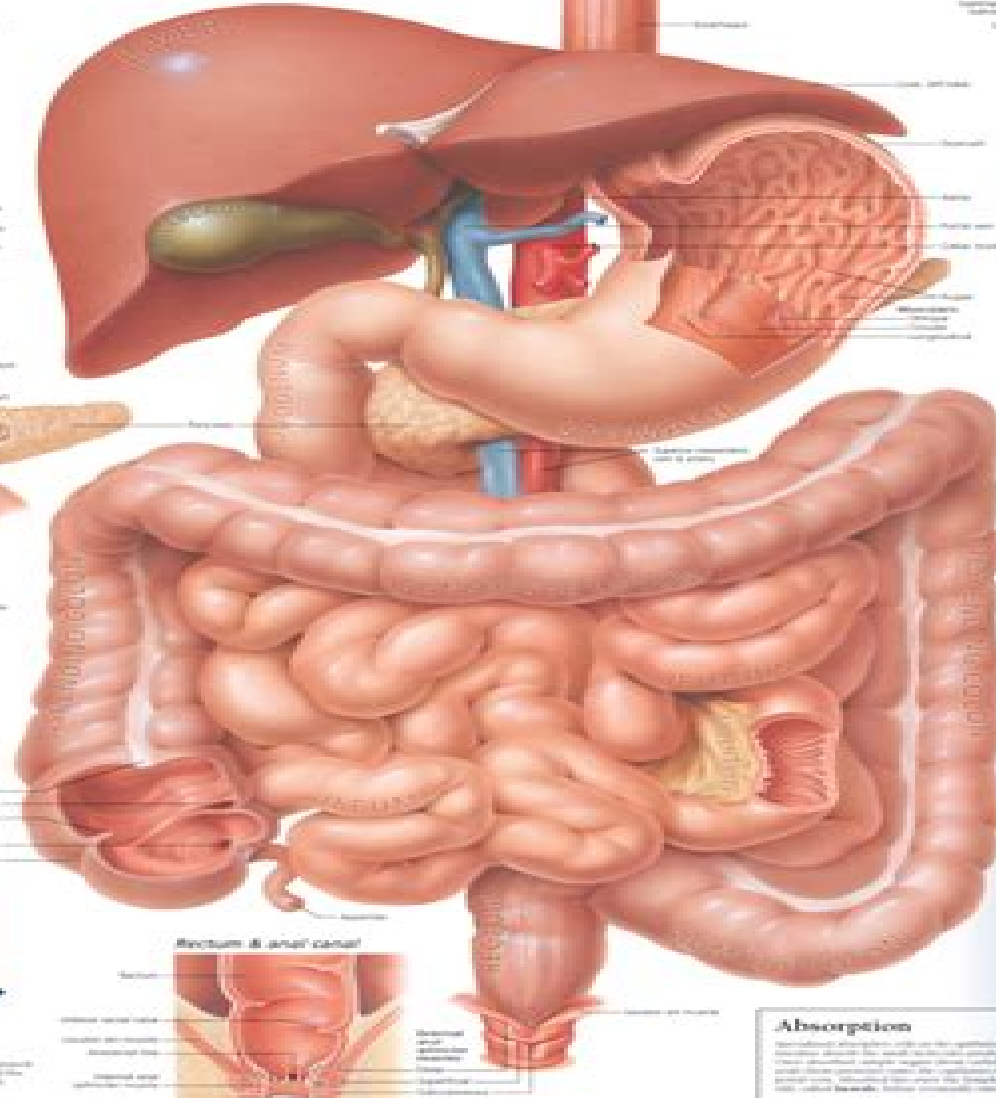

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the caecum, the ascending colon, the transverse colon, the descending colon, the sigmoid colon, and the rectum. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the chyme, and for storing and eliminating waste.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

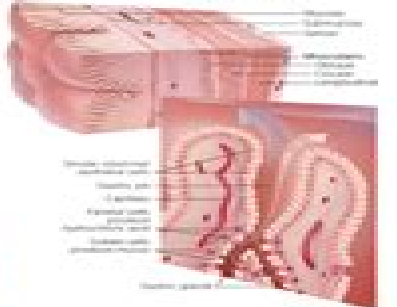

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps the mechanical breakdown of the food. Saliva also contains the enzyme amylase, which begins the chemical digestion of carbohydrates. Saliva also contains mucus, which helps the food slide down the esophagus.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for storing and mixing food with gastric juices. The stomach is divided into two main parts: the fundus (upper part) and the pylorus (lower part). The pylorus is responsible for regulating the passage of food into the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine consists of three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum. The duodenum is the first part of the small intestine, where it receives chyme from the stomach. The jejunum is the middle part, and the ileum is the last part, which empties into the large intestine.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of the nutrients from the food. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream through the villi, which are small finger-like projections on the inner lining of the small intestine.
