

Understanding Allergies

What Is An Allergy?

An allergy is an overreaction of the immune system to a substance that is usually harmless. The immune system is the body's defense against disease-causing organisms. It normally reacts to these organisms by producing antibodies, which are proteins that help to destroy the organisms.

What Causes Allergies?

Allergies are caused by a combination of genetic and environmental factors. If you have a family history of allergies, you are more likely to develop them. Environmental factors, such as exposure to pollen, dust, and mold, can also trigger allergies.

What Are Common Allergens?

Common allergens include pollen, dust, mold, pet dander, and certain foods. These allergens can trigger a variety of allergic reactions, ranging from mild skin rashes to severe asthma attacks.

Experiencing An Allergic Reaction?

If you experience symptoms such as sneezing, itching, and hives, you may be having an allergic reaction. It is important to identify the allergen and avoid it to prevent future reactions.

Managing Allergies

There are several ways to manage allergies, including avoiding allergens, taking medication, and undergoing allergy treatment. Your doctor can help you develop a plan to manage your allergies.

Hay Fever (Allergic Rhinitis)

Hay fever is a common allergic reaction to pollen. Symptoms include sneezing, runny nose, and itchy eyes. It is usually treated with antihistamines.

Atopic Dermatitis
