Student Perceptions and Learning Approaches of Using Blogs in IT Education for Reflection and Knowledge Construction Cheuk Wai Rose Fong, 2012 Blogging is a commonly used tool in supporting reflection in student learning The present research explored the possibility of using blogs as an assessment tool for promoting self reflection and knowledge construction to the associate degree students from four different cohorts who were taught by the researcher Students were required to write reflective journals weekly in their blog as part of the course assessment The primary goal of the study was to explore any evidence of the student constructing knowledge via the blogging exercises and evaluate the blogging technology in promoting in depth self reflection

The research adopted a mixed research method which combines both quantitative and qualitative methods The study included a questionnaire which is composed of two previously developed questionnaires the Reflection Questionnaire RQ Kember 2000 and the Revised Study Process Questionnaire R SPQ 2F Biggs et al 2001 for exploring the relationships between students perceptions of blogging and their learning approaches and their level of reflective thinking The results would then triangulate with the findings of content analysis of blog posts and student interviews The study showed that deep approach scores and scores of reflective thinking scales have been found as a significant contribution to the explanation of the portfolio and total course marks It also showed that there is strong relationship between the learning approach and the students habit of reflective thinking By comparing the pre teaching with post teaching scores it is found that a positive change in the total scores of deep approach in particular in deep strategy subscale and a positive change in the total scores of higher levels of reflective thinking reflection and critical reflection Furthermore the results showed that a negative change in the total scores of the lowest level of reflective thinking habitual action These implied that blogging may motivate students to learn deeper and drive them to think reflectively

The Art of Reflective Thinking (UM Press) Adelina Asmawi, 2016 If you have been practicing your vocation without critical reflection this book is for you It looks carefully at the need for structured reflectivity within a community of practitioners through an online platform The book also discusses expert mediation of practitioners professional development through the online community It then extends further to include discussions of the gen next s preference for horizontal discourse and multimodality It is hoped that readers would be able to grasp a renewed understanding of reflective practice for professional development

Marginalia in Modern Learning Contexts Reid, Alan J., 2018-11-09 Although reading can be regarded as an isolated and private endeavor the white space in the margins of a printed book or the comments section at the end of an online article can provide a welcomed space for interaction Annotation and marginalia share similar meanings a reader's contribution to a text which might consist of alphabetic image and video content While it has always been more common to think of this strategy in the context of a student and a textbook it is being more widely used through online communications such as commenting on liking and sharing social media posts The behaviors of readers as they engage with a text says a lot about their involvement interest and intentions Marginalia in Modern Learning Contexts is a collection of innovative research on the methods and applications of interaction between readers and texts through digital means such as commenting or physical annotation such as writing in the margins of a book and how these strategies can be applied in educational settings While highlighting topics including social annotation teacher education and technological expertise this book is ideally designed for educators administrators academicians researchers and students seeking current research on digital and physical annotation methods and strategies and their applications in educational environments Using Blogs to Enhance Literacy Diane Penrod, 2007 Adolescents spend nearly six hours a day online with most of those hours focused on blogging Whether they are writing on MySpace Xanga Bebo LiveJournal or some other site these youngsters invest time and energy creating new or different social identities Beyond the mainstream media hype about the dangers of adolescents and blogs we find that these young people are developing 21st century literacies especially in information and visual literacy Using Blogs to Enhance Literacy examines this phenomenon and how it affects adolescents from offering easy avenues for bullying to bridging the digital divide In this book Diane Penrod addresses the social developmental and pedagogical issues surrounding the use of blogs and the implications that blogging has for current and future students An Activity Theoretical Analysis of Microblogging and Blogging by Spanish L2 Learners in a Bridging Activities Framework Margaret Alvarado, 2015 The use of blogging tools in the second language classroom has been investigated from a variety of theoretical and methodological perspectives Alm 2009 Armstrong Dippold 2009 Ducate Elola Jauregi Lee 2009 Petersen Divitini Pinkman 2005 Raith 2009 Soares 2008 Sun 2009 2012 Vurdien 2011 Yang 2009 and a growing number of studies examine the use of microblogging tools for language learning Antenos Conforti 2009 Borau Ullrich Feng Lomicka Perifanou 2009 Grounded in Cultural Historical Activity Theory Engestrom 1987 the present study explores the outcomes of a semester long project based on the Bridging Activities framework Thorne Reinhardt 2008 and implemented in an intermediate hybrid Spanish language course at a large public university in Arizona in which students used microblogging and blogging tools to collect digital texts analyze perspectives of the target culture and participate as part of an online community of language learners with a broader audience of native speakers The research questions are 1 What technology is used by the students with what frequency and for what purposes in both English and Spanish prior to beginning the project 2 What are students values and attitudes toward using Twitter and Blogger as tools for learning Spanish and how do they change over time through their use in the project during the semester course and 3 What tensions emerge in the activity systems of the intermediate Spanish language students throughout the process of using Twitter and Blogger for the project What are the underlying reasons for the tensions How are they resolved The data was collected using pre post and periodic surveys which included Likert and open ended questions as well as the participants microblog and blog posts The quantitative data was analyzed using descriptive statistics and the qualitative data was analyzed to identify emerging themes following the Constant Comparative Method Glaser Strauss 1967 Finally three participant outliers were selected as case studies for activity theoretical analysis in order to identify tensions and through their resolution evidence of expansive learning Enabling Reflective Thinking Kathryn Coleman,Adele Flood,2016-06-30 Reflective Practice in Action Nijisiree Waeochan,2004
