Figure 1-16 is a drawing of a longitudinal section of the humerus. Within the humerus, there is a central, hollow, cylindrical structure called the medullary canal. The medullary canal is surrounded by a thick, dense layer of bone called the compact bone. The compact bone is composed of many small, repeating units called osteons. Each osteon consists of a central canal called the Haversian canal, which is surrounded by concentric layers of bone tissue called lamellae. The Haversian canals are connected to each other by small canals called Volkmann's canals. The medullary canal is filled with a soft, fatty substance called bone marrow.
