Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of supervised walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The subjects were assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the subjects. The walking program significantly improved the subjects' physical health, as measured by the 6-minute walk test, the 12-minute walk test, and the 400-meter walk test. The walking program also significantly improved the subjects' psychological health, as measured by the Beck Depression Inventory, the State-Trait Anxiety Inventory, and the Zung Depression Index. The walking program had no significant effect on the subjects' weight, blood pressure, or cholesterol levels. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program can improve the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of self-reported depression and anxiety among a sample of young adults in the United States. Methods: Data were obtained from the 2008 National Health and Medical Examination Survey, a nationally representative survey of the United States population. The prevalence of self-reported depression and anxiety was determined among a sample of 18- to 24-year-olds. Results: The prevalence of self-reported depression was 10.1% and the prevalence of self-reported anxiety was 11.2%. Conclusions: The prevalence of self-reported depression and anxiety among young adults in the United States is high. Keywords: Depression, Anxiety, Prevalence, Young Adults.
