Zemadim, B., McCartney, M., Langan,
S., Sharma, B.

2013 November Zimsec Physical Sciences Paper 2:

Confronting the Curse Cullen S. Hendrix, Marcus Noland, 2014 The political economy of natural resource wealth poses two interrelated challenges for American foreign policy both involving governance issues in countries that are abundantly endowed with natural resources The potentially negative impact of natural resources on development is captured in the phrase the resource curse The implications are the greatest for the commodity producers themselves ranging from complications for macroeconomic management to political authoritarianism and in the extreme the precipitation of violent civil conflict For US policy the resource curse presents challenges with respect to coping with state failure and associated transborder phenomena The issues extend to broader geopolitics Resource abundance confers financial and political power on producers China's emergence as a major importer and investor in extraction willing to accommodate authoritarian producers exacerbates the challenge potentially undercutting international efforts to encourage greater transparency and improved management of natural resource wealth This issue is of particular importance for US policy toward Africa

Population Growth and Rapid Urbanization in the Developing World Benna, Umar G., Garba, Shaibu

Bala, 2016-06-07 As the global population continues to boom particularly in the developing countries it has become necessary to find ways to handle this increase through various policy tools that address population growth and urbanization problems The urbanization process has both potentials issues as well as opportunities to move societies forward that need to be exploited Population Growth and Rapid Urbanization in the Developing World examines trends challenges issues and strategies adopted by developing countries in the face of population growth and rapid urbanization and its impact on urban environments The book explores patterns of population growth and urbanization use of different governance approaches in addressing challenges as well as different tools and systems of appropriate allocation to address issues The book is a comprehensive reference for academicians students practitioners professionals managers urban planners and government officials World social science report, 2016 UNESCO, International Social Science Council, University of Sussex (UK).

Institute of Development Studies, 2016-09-22 The Report launched on 22 September at the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm highlights significant gaps in social science data about inequalities in different parts of the world and to support progress towards more inclusive societies calls for more robust research into the links between economic inequalities and disparities in areas such as gender education and health A participatory approach for hydrometeorological monitoring in the Blue Nile River Basin of Ethiopia Zemadim, B., McCartney, M., Langan, S., Sharma, B., 2014-04-08 Participatory research is increasingly recognized as being useful for conducting multiple activities in research for development projects The co learning environment created in participatory research helps to identify existing social and technological gaps and develop possible solutions to improve the livelihoods of rural communities This report describes a participatory approach used in the establishment and implementation of hydrometeorological monitoring networks in the Blue Nile River Basin of Ethiopia The networks were established with the involvement of rural communities and other stakeholders to gain insights into the hydrological processes of the watersheds in order to improve rainwater management strategies Local people were involved in the day to day management and maintenance of the networks The participatory approach proved beneficial for several reasons not least because it instilled trust and goodwill amongst the communities

Water is Life Hellum, Anne, Kameri-Mbote, Patricia, 2015-10-19 This book approached water and sanitation as an African gender and human rights issue Empirical case studies from Kenya Malawi South Africa and Zimbabwe show how coexisting international national and local regulations of water and sanitation respond to the ways in which different groups of rural and urban women gain access to water for personal domestic and livelihood purposes The authors who are lawyers sociologists political scientists and anthropologists explore how women cope in contexts where they lack secure rights and participation in water governance institutions formal and informal The research shows how women as producers of family food rely on water from multiple sources that are governed by community based norms and institutions which recognise the right to water for livelihood How these common pool water resources due to protection gaps in both international and national law are threatened by large scale development and commercialisation initiatives facilitated through national permit systems is a key concern The studies demonstrate that existing water governance structures lack mechanisms which make them accountable to poor and vulnerable water users on the ground most importantly women The findings thus underscore the need to intensify measures to hold states accountable not just in water services provision but in assuring the basic human right to clean drinking water and sanitation and also to protect water for livelihoods
