Growth Patterns in Physical Sciences and Biology Jaun-Manuel Garcia-Ruiz, Enrique Louis, P. Meakin, Leonard M.

Sander, 2012-12-06 During the past decade interest in the formation of complex disorderly patterns far from equilibrium has grown rapidly This interest has been stimulated by the development of new approaches based primarily on fractal geometry to the quantitative description of complex structures increased understanding of non linear phenomena and the introduction of a variety of models such as the diffusion limited aggregation model that provide paradigms for non equilibrium growth phenomena Advances in computer technology have played a crucial role in both the experimental and theoretical aspects of this enterprise Substantial progress has been made towards the development of comprehensive understanding of non equilibrium growth phenomena but most of our current understanding is based on simple computer models Pattern formation processes are important in almost all areas of science and technology and clearly pattern growth pervades biology Very often remarkably similar patterns are found in quite diverse systems In some case dielectric breakdown electrodeposition fluid fluid displacement in porous media dissolution patterns and random dendritic growth for example the underlying causes of this similarity is quite well understood In other cases vascular trees nerve cells and river networks for example we do not yet know if a fundamental relationship exists between the mechanisms leading the formation of these structures Parliamentary Papers Great Britain.
