Reflection-in-Motion Jaclyn Fiscus-Cannaday, 2025-05-23 Reflection in Motion considers how reflective practice is embedded in daily course happenings centering the experiences of students and teachers in Minority Serving Institutions to amplify underrepresented viewpoints about how reflection works in the writing classroom Jaclyn Fiscus Cannaday examines how its availability is subject to teacher student power dynamics the literacies welcomed or not in the class the past and present pedagogies that students are engaging with and attending to and the interactions among humans materials and emotions within the rhetorical context She adopts an intersectional feminist perspective for an inclusive view of how practitioners name identify and practice reflection in the everyday moments of writing classrooms Fiscus Cannaday invokes a Black feminist qualitative research method that Venus Evans Winters calls a mosaic When researchers collect both traditional and nontraditional texts to create a full view of students and teachers interviews at three institutions a Hispanic

Serving Institution a Historically Black College and University and an Asian American Native American Pacific Islander Serving Institution she finds that practitioners often build definitions from past experiences with reflection and then use those definitions as terministic screens to decide if an activity can be named identified and practiced as reflection These definitions hold different rhetorical effects reflection for introspection reflection for learning reflection for mindfulness and reflection for awareness Reflection is used for these different rhetorical effects but because classrooms so often focus on the Westernized view and its emphasis on growth reflection has the underused and undertheorized potential rhetorical effect of helping students investigate their identities and positionalities acknowledge deep rooted ideologies and consider new perspectives so they can better work across difference Reflection in Motion will inspire teachers and writing program administrators to listen to how students define and practice reflection and why thus making room for more capacious definitions of reflection and student centered practices of what reflection can do and be

The Course Reflection Project

Nicole Schonemann, Emily Metzgar, Andrew Libby, 2015-05-01 Service learning is entering a post initiatory phase At tertiary institutions of all types and sizes service learning programs are common and service learning requirements for graduation are growing in popularity Taken together alongside continued faculty interest in effective teaching these factors have raised the visibility and popularity of service learning Now the greater need in service learning is not to prove the need for or efficacy of service learning but to turn the focus squarely back on practice Following established best practice is not enough instructors also need to reflect on how this fits within the specific context and application of each unique course and service learning partnership While there are many excellent resources that detail best practice and showcase exemplary service learning courses faculty reflection and course revision often goes unmentioned In response to the lack of attention on the role of reflection and course revision we convened groups of faculty from a variety of disciplines to reflect deeply on their courses paying specific attention to obstacles and challenges These conversations were converted to articles for this edited collection each chapter representing the process of reflection and revision and serving as a guide to develop effective practice in varied curricular contexts This text contributes to the body of literature on service learning in a unique and practical manner Faculty teaching or interested in teaching service learning classes would benefit from this text as well as university administrators and community service directors involved in service learning at a programmatic and institutional level This book should be marketed to faculty teaching disciplinary service learning classes and service learning pedagogy classes and administrative offices involved in service learning This could be a supplementary text for graduate level pedagogy courses Higher education institutional libraries would benefit from this text as well as the national and state campus compact offices

Higher Education and Civic Engagement: International Perspectives Iain Mac Labhrainn, 2016-12-05 This volume provides an original and powerful contribution to debates about the civic purpose of higher education It suggests that universities can best realize their civic mission by making it central to their policy and practice Bringing together researchers from three continents the book offers an international perspective based primarily upon first hand pedagogical experience A transatlantic overview of the purpose place and practice of one such pedagogy service learning is provided and its potential as a foundation for civic engagement assessed In its last section the book moves from the theory of citizenship to practical considerations In doing so the book offers advice on establishing civic engagement to all those involved in teaching and learning within higher education

Making Citizens Beth C. Rubin, 2012-05-23 Can social studies classrooms be effective makers of citizens if much of what occurs in these classrooms does little to prepare young people to participate in the civic and political life of our democracy Making Citizens illustrates how social studies can recapture its civic purpose through an approach that incorporates meaningful civic learning into middle and high school classrooms The book explains why social studies teachers particularly those working in diverse and urban areas should infuse civic education into their teaching and outlines how this can be done effectively Directed at both pre service and in service social studies teachers and designed for easy integration into social studies methods courses this book follows students and teachers in social studies classrooms as they experience a new approach to the traditional history oriented social studies curriculum using themes essential questions discussion writing current events and action research to explore enduring civic questions Following the experiences of three teachers working at three diverse high schools Beth C Rubin considers how social studies classrooms might become places where young people study ponder discuss and write about relevant civic questions while they learn history She draws upon the latest sociocultural theories on youth civic identity development to describe a field tested approach to civic education that takes into consideration the classroom and curricular constraints faced by new teachers
