

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile and releases it into the duodenum.

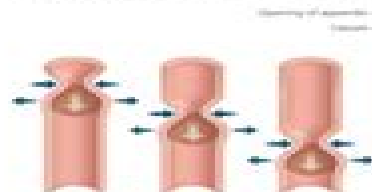

Layers of large intestine

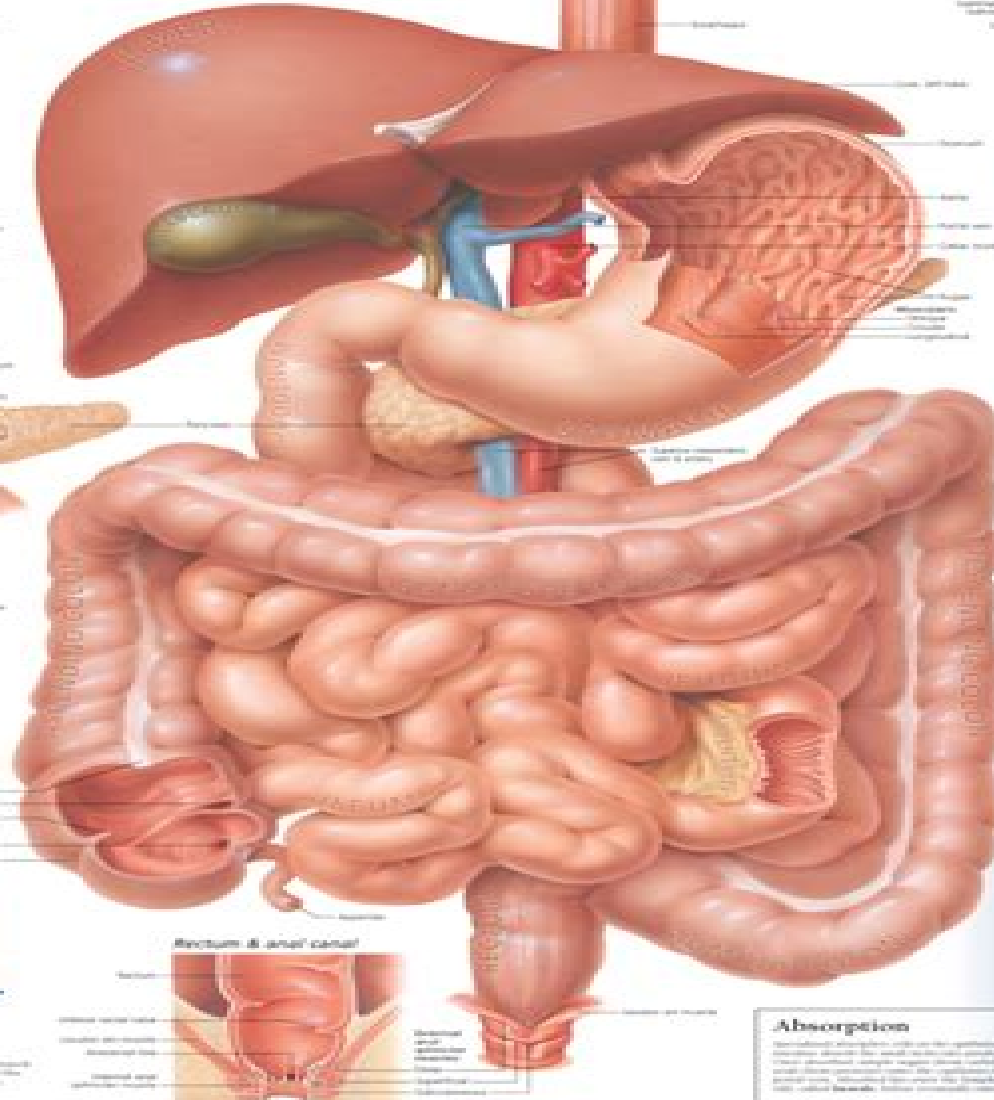

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

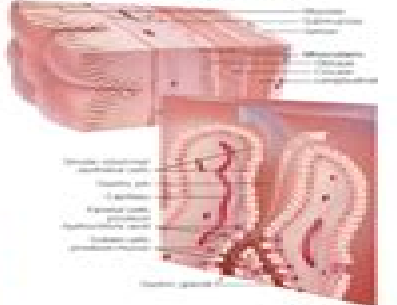

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and throat.

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper abdomen and is connected to the esophagus and small intestine. The stomach wall is composed of several layers of muscle and is lined with gastric pits and glands.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the lower abdomen and is connected to the stomach and large intestine. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Intestinal lining

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are then transported to the rest of the body through the bloodstream.
