vomer bone with the septal cartilage. Septal deviations may also occur due to developmental abnormality. If the deviation is severe, it may block the nasal passageway entirely. Even a partial blockage may lead to infection. If inflammation occurs, it may cause nasal congestion, blockage of the paranasal sinus openings, chronic sinusitis, headache, and nosebleeds. The condition usually can be corrected or improved surgically.

Orbits

Seven bones of the skull join to form each orbit (eye socket) or orbital cavity, which contains the eyeball and associated structures (Figure 7.12). The three cranial bones of the orbit are the frontal, sphenoid, and ethmoid; the four facial bones are the palatine, zygomatic, lacrimal, and maxilla. Each pyramid-shaped orbit has four regions that converge posteriorly:

1. Parts of the frontal and sphenoid bones comprise the roof of the orbit.
2. Parts of the zygomatic and sphenoid bones form the lateral wall of the orbit.
3. Parts of the maxilla, zygomatic, and palatine bones make up the floor of the orbit.

4. Parts of the maxilla, lacrimal, ethmoid, and sphenoid bones form the medial wall of the orbit.

Associated with each orbit are five openings:

1. The optic foramen (canal) is at the junction of the roof and medial wall.
2. The superior orbital fissure is at the superior lateral angle of the apex.
3. The inferior orbital fissure is at the junction of the lateral wall and floor.
4. The supraorbital foramen is on the medial side of the supraorbital margin of the frontal bone.
5. The lacrimal fossa is in the lacrimal bone.

Foramina

We mentioned most of the foramina (openings for blood vessels, nerves, or ligaments) of the skull in the descriptions of the cranial and facial bones that they penetrate. As preparation for studying other systems of the body, especially the nervous and cardiovascular systems, these foramina and the structures passing through them are listed in Table 7.3. For your convenience and for future reference, the foramina are listed alphabetically.

The orbit is a pyramid-shaped structure that contains the eyeball and associated structures.
