

ACCOUNTING PROBLEMS B.Com. PART II

department, process or product is made to bear charges and expenses which should have been more equitably charged to another. To install a system of cost finding that would be of the highest value for the manufacturer, a thorough technical knowledge of the product as well as complete commercial and organizing ability are necessary. It is impossible to make the working of any business fit into a ready-made costing system. The system must be adapted to suit the requirements of the business; but, while introducing a system in any business, it is desirable to proceed with caution at the outset and to extend the system according to the necessity.

Advantages of Cost Accounts

The advantages of Cost Accounts may be summarised as under:-

- (1) They help to determine the true cost of each article, process or contract.
- (2) They enable true comparisons to be made of the different classes and quantities of materials used, also of the various methods of manufacture, and give reliable data for the determination of profitable Cost Estimates.
- (3) They conduce towards operative efficiency of the finished manufacture.
- (4) They help towards the prompt preparation of Cost Estimates and fixing of Selling Prices in accordance with any altered market conditions.
- (5) They serve as a means to reducing cost by improving organisation and effecting economies in methods and equipment, or by obtaining increased output.
- (6) They act as a means to control and check on the employees by detecting leakages or waste of material, both intentional and accidental, and losses by way of unremunerative expense.

Method of Costing

- (1) Job Costing or Contract Costing This method is used to cost jobs or contracts that are kept separate during manufacture or construction. It is applicable to job order work in factories and workshops, and contracts undertaken by contractors, builders, shipbuilders, printers, garages, film studios, etc. The unit of cost is the job, order or contract.
- (2) Batch Costing This method is employed where orders or jobs are arranged in batches. Convenient for production, the batches being costed separately, from which unit costs are determined for the units produced.
- (3) Process Costing This method is used where the manufacture passes through different
