

VEGIUM LAB

Average Atomic Mass

Objectives

- Determine the weight of each isotope of the fictitious element "VEGIUM".
- Determine the relative abundances of the isotopes of "VEGIUM".
- Calculate from experimental data the average mass of "VEGIUM".

Introduction

Isotopes are atoms of the same atomic number having different masses due to different numbers of neutrons. The atomic mass of an element is a weighted average, taking into account both the mass and relative abundances of each isotope of that element as it occurs in nature. The relative abundances and masses of each atomic particles are measured in the laboratory by an independent method or statistical methods. The mass spectrometer separates particles by mass and measures the mass and relative abundance of each type of particle in nature. From these data a weighted average is calculated to determine the atomic mass of the element.

Purpose

In this lab you will carry out experimentally and perform the necessary calculations to determine the mass, mass of isotopes, three isotopes of "VEGIUM" (three elements for nitrogen, neon, and boron) and three types of particles. These isotopes are different particles of "VEGIUM" having different masses. Unlike real isotopes, the hypothetical real type particles (neon, neon, and boron) and mass slightly in, mass, we will determine the average mass of each type of isotopic particle. Then you will determine the relative abundance of each isotope, and use the data along with the isotopic masses to calculate the weighted average mass, or atomic mass, of "VEGIUM".

Materials & Equipment

- 100g of "VEGIUM"
- 100g of "VEGIUM"
- weighing boat that will fit in weighing scale

Experimental Procedure

Carry out the following steps and record your results in your data table. Round all calculations neatly to a maximum of four significant figures.

1. Weigh all three boxes, three all three particles, three all three isotopes of neon, three all three isotopes of boron.
 2. Count all the particles, three all three particles, three all three isotopes of neon, three all three isotopes of boron.
 3. Divide the total mass of each isotope by the number of each isotope to get the average mass of each isotope.
- Now, in all cases, average the average mass in the table, the number in the "total" column and the "average" column. Using a few numbers, average each mass. It is an average because the mass of each isotope is not the same. The fact that there are different
