

All My sons

Arthur Miller

Short summary:

Joe and Kate Keller had two sons, Chris and Larry. Keller was a successful businessman owned a manufacturing plant with Steve Deever, and their families were close. During the war, Keller's and Deever's manufacturing plant had a very profitable contract with the U.S. Army, supplying airplane parts. One morning, a shipment of defective parts came in. Keller didn't want to slow business he sent a group that he knew to be defective (not working perfectly), and twenty-one pilots died as a result.

Steve and Keller were arrested, but Keller claimed that the parts went out without his knowledge and that his partner was the one who had covered it up. Keller went home free, while Steve remained in jail.

Larry, was missing in action, but his mother insisted that he was still alive. Later we learn that he committed suicide on learning of his father's arrest.

Chris has asked Ann (Steve's daughter and Larry's old girlfriend) to marry him. Ann's brother George arrived to stop the wedding. He had gone to visit Steve in jail to tell him that his daughter was getting married, and then he left newly convinced that his father was innocent and convinced of Keller's guilt. Chris's confidence in his father's innocence is shaken, however, and in a confrontation with his parents, he is told by Mother that he must believe that Larry is alive. If Larry is dead, Mother claims, then it means that Keller killed him by shipping out those defective parts.

Mother told Keller that he ought to volunteer to go to jail if Chris wanted him to. She also talked to Ann and continued insisting that Larry is alive. Ann was forced to show Mother the letter that Larry wrote to her before he died, which was essentially a suicide note. The note basically confirms Mother's belief that if Larry is dead, then Keller is responsible—not because Larry's plane had the defective parts, but because Larry killed himself in response to the family responsibility and shame due to the defective parts.

Keller entered, and Mother was unable to prevent Chris from reading Larry's letter aloud. Keller now finally understood that all the dead pilots were his sons. He says that he was going into the house to get a jacket, and then he would drive to the jail. But a moment later, a gunshot is heard—Keller has killed himself.

Performing Maternity in Early Modern England Kathryn R. McPherson, 2016-12-05 Performing Maternity in Early Modern England features essays that share a common concern with exploring maternity's cultural representation performative aspects and practical consequences in the period from 1540 1690 The essays interrogate how early modern texts depict fertility conception delivery and gendered constructions of maternity by analyzing a wealth of historical documents and images in conjunction with dramatic and non dramatic literary texts They emphasize that the embodied repeated and public nature of maternity defines it as inherently performative and ultimately central to the production of gender identity during the early modern period

The Cambridge Companion to Victorian Poetry Joseph Bristow, 2000-10-26 This Companion to Victorian Poetry provides an introduction to many of the pressing issues that absorbed the attention of poets from the 1830s to the 1890s It introduces readers to a range of topics including historicism patriotism prosody and religious belief The thirteen specially commissioned chapters offer insights into the works of well known figures such as Matthew Arnold Robert Browning and Alfred Tennyson and the writings of women poets like Michael Field Amy Levy and Augusta Webster whose contribution to Victorian culture has in more recent years been acknowledged by modern scholars Revealing the breadth of the Victorians' experiments with poetic form this Companion also discloses the extent to which their writings addressed the prominent intellectual and social questions of the day The volume which will be of interest to scholars and students alike features a detailed chronology of the Victorian period and a
