There is a serious, often-forgotten problem affecting most of our economic systems: the failure to provide for sufficient resources to satisfy the needs of the "Big Three" of the 21st century: Education, Health, and the Environment. These resources have been used liberally (through subsidies, discounts, credit, etc.), but not judiciously. Because of our many years of shortsightedness, we are now faced with a crisis of resources, especially for the "Big Three". It is time to change our economic system to provide for the needs of the future. We must do this now, or we will be faced with a crisis of resources, especially for the "Big Three".
