book was designed to provide and encourage practitioner s development and use of critical drug information evaluation skills through a deeper understanding of the foundational principles of study design and statistical methods Because guidance on how a study s limited findings should not be used is rare practitioners must understand and evaluate for themselves the veracity and implications of the inherently limited primary literature findings they use as sources of drug information to make evidence based decisions together with their patients The editors organized the book into three supporting sections to meet their pedagogical goals and address practitioners needs in translating research into practice Thanks to the editors

Linear and Non-Linear Financial Econometrics Mehmet Terzioğlu, Gordana Djurovic, Martin Bojaj, 2021-03-17 The importance of experimental economics and econometric methods increases with each passing day as data quality and software performance develops. New econometric models are developed by diverging from earlier classical econometric models with the emergence of specialized fields of study. This book, which is expected to be an extensive and useful reference by bringing together some of the latest developments in the field of econometrics, also contains quantitative examples and problem sets. We thank all the authors who contributed to this book with their studies that provide extensive and accessible explanations of the existing econometric methods.

Internet Use and Psychological Well-Being Among Children and Adolescents Yangu Pan, Zhaojun Teng, Daniel Tan Lei Shek, Chun Chen, 2024-01-22 Internet use and smartphone use, social media use, is ubiquitous in our daily lives and plays an increasingly important role in human well-being. Today's adolescents and their parents spend significant amounts of time on technological devices such as smartphones, especially during COVID-19. In this year, new research shows that nearly half of American teenagers say they use the Internet almost constantly. 95% of American teens have smartphones, and about 54% of teens said it would be somewhat hard to give up social media. Hence, further research on the relationship between Internet use and psychological well-being among children and adolescents is worth pursuing. At the same time, a new interest in this area of research is parental technoference, which was defined as regular interruptions to real-time face-to-face communications, interactions, or time spent together among family members because of parental use of technology. Technoference has become a common phenomenon in many families with children, and evidence has been identified that extended parental time on technological devices, e.g., smartphones, could have negative effects on parent-child relationships and children's well-being. For example, parental phubbing is regarded as a typical parental technoference, and this term is used widely in some countries around the world, which has been demonstrated to be detrimental to their children's developmental outcomes and cause various psychological health problems.
